[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Lexington, Va., September 19.—This afternoon saw the fourth workout of the Washington and Lee football squad.

Sixty men have been out every afternoon, taking two hours' good work.

Under the direction of Coach Pollard.

With a number of last year's team and some promising new material, there is every prospect for a winning team.

Clavis Moomaw, of Roanoke, is captain of the team. He has been working hard with the squad and declares that he is well pleased with the outlook.

Moomaw was one of the mainstays of the team last year. Playing at right guard, he could always be depended on to hold that side of the line.

His strong, consistent work of last year will no doubt be repeated this year, as he is in the best of condition.

Miller, the big tackle of last year's team, is out again. His strong play in the offensive, which he showed last year, in carrying the ball and in opening holes in the line, no doubt will be supplemented this year by a high order of defensive work.

He is a wonderful place kicker, able as he is to put the ball squarely between the posts from the middle of the field. His value to the team was shown last season, when he turned the tide of the Davidson game in the last two minutes of play, making a 14-12 victory instead of a 12-11 defeat for Washington and Lee.

Rogers, the big guard of last season, is ready to begin his second year on the team. Beginning with little previous experience, he developed before the end of the season into a valuable and unusually reliable man. Always a hard worker, he is likely to win a reputation before the close of the season.

O'Quinn, last year's quarter, is on the field again, and promises to hold his job against all comers, despite the loss of good quarter backs said to be among the players. Among the other old men are Wadsworth, captain of last year's team, who is well known for his wonderful punting and general fast and aggressive play; Burke and Harmon, ends; Davis, full back; Hobson, tackle; Ordeman, half back. The new material is very promising, and from present prospects some of the old men will have to hustle to hold their jobs.

Dr. Pollard will be in charge of the squad again this season. He will be assisted by Derrill Pratt, of the University of Alabama, who will arrive tomorrow.

Pratt's play at Alabama was the talk of the South for several years, and those who know say that he will make as good a coach as he did a player. So far the work on the field has been rather light, consisting chiefly in joggling, punting and passing the ball and such preliminary work, as will be necessary to harden the men for more serious business. Signal work will begin before the end of the week, and scrimmages have been promised the men by the middle of next week.

The whole squad is anxious to get into the real work of the season, and enthusiasm is so abundant that Dr. Pollard finds it difficult to keep the men from overworking themselves at this early date.

The schedule, as made out by Manager Pipes, will keep the bunch hustling from the time Roanoke is met here on October 7 until the Thanksgiving game is played at New Orleans against Tulane.

BATTLE AXES WILL PLAY SAILOR MEN

The Battle Axes will cross bats with the strong team from the United States ship Franklin at Broad Street this Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this season. The sailor boys have an enviable record, and an interesting series is promised. The season has advanced forty-eight and lost nine games this season, and they have been against some of the best amateur teams in the country.

They will line up as follows: Corbett, second base; Hill or Mundy, catcher; Steger, first base; Edmundson, shortstop; Burch, right field; Elm or Schmidt, left field; Morrow or Mundy, third base; Fox, Elm or Blank, pitcher.

The Battle Axes will use practically the same line-up as in the intercity series against Baltimore and Washington.

World's Series Oct. 14

Chicago, Ill., September 19.—The world's series will probably start October 14, according to Ben Johnson, the American League.

Neither the Cubs nor Giants seem to have a chance to advance their closing games on October 12, and Johnson believes that the National Commission will decide to start the series on the Saturday following the close of the National League season.

The Athletics will, therefore, have plenty of time to put on an edge on the American League champions. These games will be played at Baltimore, October 8; Washington, October 10; and Richmond, October 11 and 12.
